REIGATE, the name of a hundred lying on the southern side of the county, between the hundred of Wootton east, and Tandridge west; of Wallington, and of Coptorn, and Effingham north, and adjoining to Sussex south. [For the parishes contained in this hundred, see the general description of the county, preceding the alphabetical.]

REIGATE, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Reigate, 6 miles S.S.W. from Croydon, $11\frac{1}{2}$ E. from Dorking, and 21 S.S.W. from London, on the road to Brighton; containing, by the census of 1801, 407 houses, and 2246 inhabitants, of whom 234 were returned as being employed in trade. Total population, by the census of 1811, 2240; and of 1821, 2961. The town, which is a great thoroughfare, is seated in a pleasant valley, called Holmesdale, extending from Dorking, in an easterly direction, to the county of Kent, and on a branch of the river Mole. A gate, a cave, and some other small remains are still to be seen of Holmscastle, built by the Earls of Warren, and in which the turbulent barons are said to have held frequent meetings. The castle was forfeited by Lord Monson during the civil wars. In the reign of King William it was granted to Lord Somers. Here was a friary. See the PRIORY. The market-house was formerly a chapel, dedicated to Thomas-a-Becket: it is now also the sessions-house.

The borough has sent two members to parliament ever since the second of Edward I.; the right of election being in the householders of the borough. The town gives title of Baron to the Earl of Peterborough. In the neighbourhood there is fullers-earth. Market on Tuesday. Fairs for cattle first Tuesday in every month, Whit-Monday, and 9th December; and for pedlery, Holy Cross, 14th September. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*; patroness, Miss Snelson; incumbent, Rev. — Snelson. For an account of a bequest of 10*s.* 6*d.* to the minister for every sermon after evening service, see CHIPSTEAD.

Amongst the genteel residences here, besides some mentioned under their respective names, are those of—the Baron Meseres, a handsome mansion, with beautiful lawn and pleasure-grounds, at the entrance of the town from Croydon and Merstham; — Saunders, Esq. a mansion, park and pleasure-grounds, at the same entrance, at a short distance from the road on the right; Miss Saunders; Rev. Robert Snelson, rectory; at the like entrance on the left, a mansion, park, lawn, &c. the property of Miss Fox, in the care of servants; Mr. Glover. In the town, Mr. Ambrose Mansell; Mr. Paley; Mr. Samuel Elcock; a large house of Mr. Robinson, not occupied; Thomas Gale, Esq. banker; Mr. Neale, brewer; Messrs. Piper and Co. bankers; Messrs. Dewdney, bankers; Alexander Broughton, Esq. solicitor; Mrs. Russell; — Martin, Esq. bailiff of the borough. Entrance from Brighton, at and near Woodhatch, Cockshut-hill, and Park-hill, from which are extensive prospects, the handsome mansion of T. Cherrington, Esq.; Mrs. Jones; Joseph Fosket, Esq.; Henry Cherrington, Esq.; — Gadderer, Esq.; Mr. John Carter; William Price, Esq.; Peter Dunkerley, Esq.; and Joseph Nash, jun. Esq. These mansions, and the pleasure-grounds surrounding them, together with their situation, give a charming and ornamental appearance to this neighbourhood.

RETREAT, (The) in the hamlet of Peckham, and parish of Camberwell, in a populous neighbourhood of country villas, 3 miles W. S. W. from London, on the borders of Kent; a handsome seat, with lawn and pleasure-grounds, &c. of William Bousfield, Esq.

RETREAT, (The) a handsome mansion, with beautiful shrubberies, lawns, and gardens, situate on the east-side of the town of Reigate, near the church, in a situation to which its name is very appropriate; the seat of William Turner, Esq.

RETREAT, (The) a handsome mansion, in a situation within walled shrubberies, gardens, &c. (to which the name is appropriate), in the parish of Battersea, on the east-side of the road from the village of Battersea to Clapham-common; the property of — Hadfield, Esq. lately the residence of — Alvin, Esq. and the present residence of — Randall, Esq.

REEVES-FARM, a farm in the parish of Chipsted, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. from Reigate.

REYNOLDS-BOOTH, a farm in the parish of Reigate, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from the town, near Reigate-heath.

RICHMOND, a parish in the hundred of Kingston, beautifully situated on the banks of the Thames, $10\frac{3}{4}$ miles W. S. W. from London. Containing, by the census of 1801, 823 houses, and 4628 inhabitants; of whom 541 were returned as being employed in trades, &c.: population in 1811, 5219; and in 1821, 5994. It was anciently called Sheen, which signifies in Saxon, resplendent, from the beauty of its situation. The royal palace here was long the favourite residence of the British monarchs, but the site is now occupied by private houses, held on lease under the Crown. In the reign of Henry VIII. here were two parks, which appear soon afterwards to have been joined together. The New, or Great Park, being eight miles in circumference, and containing 2253 acres; was made by Charles I. The Great-Lodge, or White-Lodge, was built by Sir Robert Walpole, at the expense of 14,000*l.* when he was ranger, in the reigns of George I. and II. It is an elegant and extensive mansion, pleasantly situated on an eminence, towards the south-easterly part of the Park; and is the residence of the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Sidmouth.—The Stone-Lodge, sometimes called the Ranger's-Lodge, was built by George I. after a design of the Earl of Pembroke, and is of considerable extent, and now the residence of Sir Henry Campbell, deputy-ranger.—The Thatched-Lodge is situate in a part of the Park which is in the parish of Kingston, and is occupied by Lady Stuart. Nearer to Petersham is the residence of Lady Pembroke.—In 1768, a very commodious Observatory was erected near the Park, by his late Majesty, and furnished with all kinds of astronomical instruments.—Part of the land is now converted into a dairy and grazing farm; and the remainder consists of gardens laid out with great taste, and adorned with many fanciful and grotesque buildings. The banks along the Thames form a noble terrace. (See also KEW.)—The church, which was repaired and enlarged in 1750, has a square tower and eight bells: at the west end of the north aisle lie the remains of Thomson, the poet, for many years a resident in Kew Foot-lane. There is a brass tablet, with an inscription to his memory, erected by the Earl of Buchan in 1792. Here is also interred the Rev. Gilbert Wakefield.—An elegant stone bridge, of five semicircular arches, was built across the Thames, and finished in 1777.—In the Vineyard are Queen Elizabeth's Almshouses, which formerly stood under the Hill, for eight poor women. There are also almshouses for ten poor women. On Richmond-hill there are likewise almshouses for ten poor women, endowed by Duppa, Bishop of Winchester, who lived here in a retired manner after the exile of Charles II. At the Marsh-gate are nine almshouses, endowed in 1758 for maiden-women.—The town runs up the Hill above a mile from East-Sheen to the New-Park, with the Royal Gardens sloping to the banks of the Thames. The Green is surrounded by lofty elms, at one corner of which is the Theatre-royal.—The living is a curacy, and was formerly a chapelry to Kingston; patronage the same as Kingston.

Richmond is surrounded by elegant seats and noble mansions, both in this county, and on the opposite bank of the Thames in Middlesex. For a description of some of the beauties and grandeur of the neighbourhood, where it is described with the beautiful winding silver Thames, see RICHMOND-HILL.—Here there are, besides the elegant seats and residences mentioned under their respective names, those of the following nobility and gentry, viz.: between Richmond and the Park, near the Park gate, with all the beauties of situation afforded by, and described under the title of, Richmond-hill, an elegant and extensive mansion, with beautiful grounds, the seat of Countess Mansfield; an elegant house of Lady Morshead; Mrs. Baker; Joseph Turner, Esq.; Lord Crawford and Lindsey; Mrs. Burn; John May, Esq.; Mrs. Brittingham. On the terrace, Miss Doughty; Mrs. Harrison; Richard Penn, Esq.; Mrs. Wilson. Below the terrace, Mungo Dick, Esq.; a splendid mansion of the Most Noble the Marquis of Stafford; an extensive mansion, Lady Cardigan; a gothic house, Mrs. Ellerker; Duchess of Devonshire; a magnificent mansion of the benevolent Duchess of Buccleugh. In Paragon-row, fronting the Thames, Lady Ann Bingham; J. B. Brenton, Esq.; Miss Fanshaw. Above the bridge, Samuel Painter, Esq. Below the bridge, fronting the Thames, — Smith, Esq. alderman of London; Mrs. Coutts; an ancient seat of the Duke of Queensberry. Old Palace-yard, Lady Sullivan. At the Old Palace, Sir David Dundas. On the Green, Sir William Twisden, an extensive mansion; John Ward, Esq.; the Rev. Dr. Wollaston; an ancient seat of the late Lord Fitzwilliam, not occupied. On the road towards Kew, an elegant house, with extensive pleasure-grounds, — Selwyn, Esq. On the road to East-Sheen, the residence of — Smith, Esq. colonel of district (the property of the Rev. J. Jeffreys, rector of Barnes); a mansion, the seat of Mrs. Palmer; an extensive and elegant mansion, the property, and late the residence, of Mrs. Abercrombie, the mother of Sir Ralph, and now the residence of the Right Honourable Lord Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry; a mansion and seat of Mrs. Mitchell.

RICHMOND-HILL, a hill delightfully situated between Richmond and Richmond-park, on the south bank of the “silver Thames,” in a neighbourhood abounding with noble mansions and beautiful scenery; presenting,

—————“ a goodly prospect
Of hills and dales,” &c.

as described by the Poet Thomson; who, contemplating a time when,

—————“ from the world,
Sacred to sweet retirement, lovers steal,”

to his Amanda thus beautifully sings:

“ Which way, Amanda, shall we bend our course?

—————Say, shall we wind
Along the stream? or walk the smiling mead?
Or court the forest glades? or wander wild
Among the waving harvests? or ascend,
While radiant summer opens all its pride,
Thy Hill, delightful Shene?* Here let us sweep
The boundless landscape: now the raptur'd eye,
Exulting swift, to huge Augusta send;
Now to the sister hills that skirt her plain, †
To lofty Harrow now, and now to where
Majestic Windsor lifts his princely brow.
In lovely contrast to this glorious view,
Calmly magnificent, then will we turn
To where the silver Thames first rural grows:
There let the feasted eye unwearied stray;
Luxuriant there rove through the pendant woods

* The old name of Richmond, signifying in Saxon, shining, or splendour.

† Highgate and Hampstead.

That nodding hang o'er Harrington's retreat,
And stooping then to Ham's embowering walks,
Beneath whose shades, in spotless peace retir'd,
With her, the pleasing partner of his heart,
The worthy Queensbury yet laments his Gay,
And polish'd Cornbury woos the willing muse;
Slow let us trace the matchless Vale of Thames;
Fair winding up to where the muses haunt
In Twit'nam's bowers, and for their Pope implore
The healing god;* to royal Hampton's pile,
To Clermont's terrac'd height, and Esher's groves,
Where, in the sweetest solitude embrac'd,
By the soft windings of the silent Mole,
From courts and senates Pelham finds repose.
Enchanting Vale! beyond what'er the muse
Has of Achaia or Hesperia sung.
O Vale of Bliss! O softly swelling Hills!
On which the power of cultivation lies,
And joys to see the wonder of his toil.
Heavens! what a goodly prospect spreads around,
Of hills and dales, and woods and lawns, and spires,
And glittering towns, and gilded streams, till all
The stretching landscape into smoke decays.

SOUTHWARK, a borough in the suburbs of the city of London, on the south side of the Thames, over which are here London and Southwark bridges. The former of great antiquity, the latter of cast-iron, completed in 1820, at an estimate of 287,000*l.* For the better accommodation of passengers, as well as with a view to avoid accidents on the river Thames, frequently occasioned by the rapid current of the water through the narrow arches of London-bridge, in consequence of the water being confined by the numerous broad piers, between them, a new bridge is about to be erected; which public benefit the British Parliament sanctioned, not only by an Act passed on the 2d of June in the present year, but by the supply of efficient means for accomplishing the design from the Treasury, in aid of the funds of the city of London; which, with the Waterloo-bridge, in the Strand, finished in 1815, by subscription, of 1,000,000*l.* added to those of Blackfriars, finished in the year 1769, Westminster-bridge built between 1730 and 1750, at an expense of 389,500*l.* and Vauxhall-bridge, which cost 300,000*l.* afford a most convenient communication from the circumjacent parts of this county with the great cities of London and Westminster, and are grand and beautiful objects, highly ornamental, and indicative of the immense wealth and concourse of the great metropolis, of which the borough of Southwark, now under description, forms no inconsiderable portion. This borough is improving in population and appearance, more particularly on the outskirts, and within a short distance, where the increase of modern erections is of an almost incredible extent, and most of the spaces which were vacant within the borough are now occupied, and the borough itself is encompassed by buildings for several miles in extent. It contains six parishes, viz. St. George's; Christ Church; St. John's, Horsleydown; St. Olave's; St. Saviour's; and St. Thomas's; and, by the census of 1801, 10,933 houses and 67,488 inhabitants, viz. 31,704 males, and 35,744 females, of whom 13,057 were employed in trade. Total population in 1811, 71,255; and, in 1821, 85,905. There is a great commercial traffic here, having amongst its various branches a very extensive one for hops, and one for sheep's wool.

Southwark appears to have had a distinct corporation prior to 1327. It was then annexed to the city of London, and the Mayor of London was appointed bailiff for the borough. Afterwards it regained its ancient privileges, and was again annexed to the city: in the reign of Edward the Sixth, for the sum of 500 marks paid to the crown by the corporation of London, it was made one of the city wards, by the name of Bridge-ward-without. The Lord Mayor has under him a steward and bailiff, and the government is in one of the 26 aldermen. The steward holds a court at St. Margaret's-hill every Monday, for the recovery of debts, and for damages and trespasses within his limits. The military government is under the Lord Lieutenant of the county. The principal street is that called the Borough High-street, commencing at London-bridge, and running south to St. Margaret's-hill. This part of the street is narrow and confined. Many of its buildings on each side exhibit the architecture of past ages. From St. Margaret's-hill to its extremity at the stones-end, being the extent of the borough, the street is much wider, continuing nearly in a line past St. George's church. Tooley-street is of considerable length, running parallel to the river, eastwardly from the end of High-street, near London-bridge, and is accounted a principal street, but it is narrow, and in the winter dirty, the Borough having in general the disadvantage of rather a low flat situation. Some of the churches and the public and charitable institutions are highly creditable to the liberality and beneficence of their founders. Near the foot of London-bridge and the entrance of Tooley-street, is St. Olave's church, erected in 1739, having a plain body, strengthened with rustic coins. The tower, consisting of three stages (the uppermost greatly diminished) is surrounded at the top by a strong balustrade. Near this church formerly stood the city residence of the Abbot of St. Augustine's in Canterbury, the site of which is now a wharf; also the mansion of the Abbot of Battle in Sussex, the site of which is now called Battle-bridge, having on the south spacious gardens, in which was a labyrinth or maze, the name being still preserved in Maze-pond, the names of the streets built thereon. Near London-bridge, in a back situation, on the west-side of the High-street, is St. Saviour's church, a noble gothic structure, in the form of a cathedral, and the largest parish church in the kingdom, anciently called St. Mary Overy's, which was originally founded by a woman, who acquired considerable riches by a ferry over the Thames, before the erection of London-bridge: that part now called Bankside was noted for its brothels, publicly licensed under the Bishop of Winchester, having a parish attached to its district, called the Clink. Near this church is the Borough-market for provisions, principally vegetables. In the High-street is St. Thomas's Hospital, instituted by Edward VI. and the parish church of St. Thomas, originally erected as a chapel for the hospital, and which adjoin to each other, and which is an impropriation in the gift of its governors, who chuse one of two returned by the parishioners. On the opposite side of St. Thomas's-street, is Guy's Hospital, of two quadrangles, founded by Thomas Guy, a citizen of London, for the relief of the poor sick and lame. At the corner of Kent-street stands St. George's church, a fine building, with a spire. A little more southerly is the King's Bench prison, for the confinement of debtors and others committed here by the Court of King's Bench, which is an extensive plain building, in a yard, surrounded by a high wall. In Horesemonger-lane is a handsome Sessions-house, and a gaol for the county. Here are several almshouses and charitable institutions.

The parish of St. George is a rectory, rated at 18*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the King; incumbent the Rev. John Buckland. St. Olave's, also a rectory, value 68*l.* 4*s.* 9½*d.*; patron the King; incumbent Rev. William Green. STOCKWELL, a hamlet in the parish of Lambeth, in the hundred of Brixton, 2 miles S. E. from Westminster-bridge. Population included in Lambeth. Here is a chapel of ease, which was erected in 1767; incumbent, rector of Lambeth. This is an elegant neighbourhood, pleasantly situated on a very gentle ascent, towards Clapham; which hath attracted so great a number of the inhabitants from the metropolis, to erect mansions, that it has become almost joined to it: many of the modern erections, however, generally, have the advantages of country houses, being detached and interspersed in a variety of situations, with open spaces around them, and various lawns and pleasure-grounds, which, with the elegant and modern structure of the houses, have a very pleasant appearance. The residences are too numerous for separate enumeration, and many of them have not established names; a few of them therefore only can be, and that imperfectly, described. Amongst some of the more handsome ones are the following; viz. On Stockwell-Common, the approach to Clapham-Common from Vauxhall, a handsome mansion of — Clagett, Esq.; also — Shewell, Esq.; — Rimington, Esq.; — Christy, Esq.; Mrs. Litts, widow of the late — Litts, Esq. a magistrate; — Strangolese, Esq.; — Crowther, Esq.; the Rev. — Prodgers.
